It was suggested Wednesday by anxious democrats that the state central committeemen in the Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth senatorial districts, which cover all of Windham districts, which cover all of Windham county, get together and name a date for holding a county convention. The sensorial convention for the Twenty-eighth district is to be held Saturday at Putnam and it is probable that something will be said about the county convention at that out the county convention at that

BROOKLYN FAIR

Opens With Big Attendance on Wednesday-All the Old Time Attractions and Many New Ones.

Brooklyn was the busiest place on the map of Windham county Wednesday, the first "big" day of the annual exhibition of the Windham county agricultural society. Not in any recent year has the society been more favored by the Weather Man, a fact that tended to bring out one of the most satisfactory attendances at a fair in the county this fall and the estimate of those who passed through the gates during the day was close to 4,000.

As early as nine o'clock, at which hour some of the exhibits were being arranged, the advance guard of the little army of fair goers commenced to throng to the grounds. They came from every corner of the county and the route of every highway stretching away into the country was marked by away into the country was marked by a sinuous trait of dust kicked up by scores of speeding autos and slower moving vehicles. Incidentally, the automobile almost entirely superseded the horse drawn transportation system that has been the dependence of the average person in getting from Danielson and other points to the fair grounds. Ma-chines by the score, the property of chines by the score, the property of garage and private owners, whizzed across the good stretch of macadam between Danielson and Brooklyn, carrying hundreds of passengers during the day and cleaning up a tidy return for the service. If there is a speed limit over that way, nary a driver had heard about it, for they plugged along at a joy ride pace, giving their fares a thriller not down on the list of features of the day. The wonder is that tures of the day. The wonder is that they got away with it without an ac-

But get away with it they did, and landed their passengers safe and sound after an amazing whirl through a tangle of carriages, trucks and about everything else that runs on wheels.

Feature Exhibits.

The fair itself has not changed as much as has the means of getting over to it. Those whose memories take them back over a 20-year acquaint-anceship with this annual event found the same staple features that have al-ways served to interest and hold their own as favorite attractions of what is primarily a strictly country fair. The giant pumpkins, tall corn, town ox teams, home made jelies, and Uncle Charlie's big red pippins, are all in their accustomed places. The cattle sheds hold as complete a showing as ever and one can be the other of as ever and one end to the other of the spacious grounds there is some-thing or somebody to make every minpleasing one.

worsteds for men's wear has been secured—an order large enough to keep the plant busy until well into the winter. The prospects are that other orders will be secured before that time. The dressers will start work tomorrow or Saturday and it is hoped to have the mill in full operation by next week. Between 35 and 46 hands will find employment in the day and night.

Within the exhibition building where Tubbs' band of Norwich gave a concert during the morning hours, are grouped the displays of the business men, the vegetable and fruit growers and of Brooklyn, Plainfield and Killingly granges. Of this grange exhibit many favorable comments were heard. Farm products served as a base for all of these, but they also included examples of the thrift of the farmers' of these, but they also included ex-amples of the thrift of the farmers' wives as artistic needlewomen and experts along culinary lines. The exhibit by Plainfield grange was arranged by Mrs. C. W. Cardiner of Moosup, who is receiving many compliments for the fine showing. The Brooklyn grangers have also been successful in arranging a section that at-tracts much attention. Killingly grange shows 42 varieties of vegeta-bles grown by members and has many other details to interest the many who pause before it. Apples from Westland Farm.

Of the fruit shown in this building the collection of apples from the Westland farm at Pomfret Center is especially notable. About every variety of apple that grows on Connecticut trees is included and each is a handsome specimen. This farm is owned by Miss Eleanor J. Clark and Mrs. Courtland Hoppin, wealthy residents. Other apple exhibitors are A. B. Lapsley of the Fox Run farm, Pomfret Center. Lester Williams and Thomas Shea. Some plates of pears and grapes are shown, but of the collection of apples and grapes are shown, but fruits the showing of apples is far and away the best.

Woman's Department.

There is not as varied a display work in the woman's department year as there has been at this fair sometimes, but all of the entries may be said to be excellent and that they received their full share of attention from the feminine visitors. There were some really beautiful pieces of embroidered work.

Poultry.

The building given over to poultry was filled all day Wednesday with fanciers along this line. O. F. Atwood, Brooklyn, shows Pekin ducks and chicks and white Plymouth Rocks. Waldo Blake has two pens containing fowl of the same kind. Two pens of barred Plymouth Rocks are shown by F. E. Miller, also of Brooklyn. Henry B. Coreland, Brooklyn, exhibits silver Poultry. B. Copeland, Brooklyn, exhibits silve spangled Hamburgs, mottled aucoucas

Herman Lathrep, Brooklyn, has a pen of barred Rocks and another of the interesting Favorall breed, this latter variety being little known hereabouts, N. G. Williams has two pens of barred rocks, Mrs. Dawley a pen in languages and another of hour scales. of langshans and another of huff rocks Curtis Wheeler a pen with five black eghorns and another with five brown leghorns. Mrs. Walter with five brown leghorns. Mrs. Walter Burdick enters Rhode Island reds, C. A. Parker Indian game, mottled aucoucas and buff rocks. Pretty Toulouse geese and goslings are shown by George E. Nichols.

Prize Cattle.

Wednesday was cattle day at the fair, at which there was the best showing of horned animals seen at a Windham county fair this fall. All of the shed spaces were taken by exhibitors, representative of various towns. C. S. Hyde shows five Ayrshire calves, all pretty animals. George N. Lyon of Woodstock has a hord of four Devons. One of the largest entrants a Alfred Ac-Ennis of Chaplin. His o head include three A) shires, fifteen Devons and a pair of oxen. Farl Gallup, Terrace farm, Brooklyn, shows fine Guernseys—twelve head in all yearlings, calves and cows included One of the best herds on the grounds ing of Ayrshires and stade calves. In this lot is a 5 year old cow, a yearling thoroughbred bull out of her and a heifer calf.

F. W. Coffey and S. M. Coffey have entered a fine collection of cattle. The former shows a thoroughbred Ayrshire bull one year old, three year old grade heifer and two year old Jersey grade heifer and two year old Jersey grade heifer and two year old Holderness heifer. Mehael Shea, Canterbury, has a thoroughbred Ayrshire bull and some grade cows. George E. Nichols. Hampton, has 8 head entered, the lot including Holsteins. Ayrshires and Guernseys, all young stock. Another of his exhibits is a Jersey red sow with nine pigs.

Of all the exhibitors in the cattle department Henry Dorrance of Plainfield has what is regarded by many as a very notable herd. This comprises 15 head of Ayrshires in the lot is a two year old bull, five I year heifers, four heifer calves, bull calf, one 2 year old cow, one 3 year old cow and two cows of 4 years and over. Mr. Dorrance has the honor of having the highest record for advanced registered cows of any man in Connecticut for this kind.

Sheep.

Only a few sheep are shown this year. C. S. Hyde, Canterbury, has two pens of Middlewool, one pens containing three ewes and a buck and the other fifteen ewes. A. A. Exais, Chaplin, has a pen with six Shrop-taining three ewes and a buck and the other fifteen ewes. A. A. Ennis, Chaplin, has a pen with six Shrop-shire—five ewes and a ram. The pulling and hauling by town steer teams, town teams, working oxen and steers, draught horses, and the exhibition of calves, yearlings, two-year olds and trained steers held the attention of many of the men during the morning hours. These contests were held in the usual place inside

Track Events.

The principal feature on the programme for the afternoon was the track events and interest centered about that quarter after the dinner hour. There were two events down, the 3-minute class and a special class trot or pace. The horses starting and the class are trot or pace. the order in which they finished was as follows:
